A new concept to free the oppressed!

Introduction

"In 1979, the Peoples' Republic of China publicly reported that several thousand of its children aged 8-14 were capable of telepathy, clairvoyance, X-ray vision, or psychokinesis. (See source links at the end of the article.) Having already heard about this program, the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), National Security Agency (NSA), Defense Intelligence Agency (DIA), Lawrence Livermore Laboratories, and the US Army were simultaneously pouring billions of dollars into their own similar research.

The Army program was headquartered at Fort Meade, Maryland, and was part of the Intelligence and Security Command (INSCOM). Leaders included Generals Edmund Thompson and Albert Stubblebine, and Colonel John Alexander.

Officers assigned to the US Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania contributed research to the project, and "The First Earth Battalion" is essentially a textual copy of one group's unclassified briefing slides.

Although decidedly New Age, the War College project was not entirely theoretical. Colonel Alexander, for example, went on to become a leader in the Los Alamos National Lab's non-lethal weapons program. Likewise, during the early 1980s Special Forces hired Richard Strozzi Heckler and other outside contractors to provide two A-teams, a total of 25 men, with training in biofeedback, aikido, and "mind-body psychology." In the latter program, a typical training day included running, swimming, "industrial-strength" calisthenics, and 1-1/2 hours of aikido practice. After six months, the soldiers were not aikido masters but they were quantifiably 75% more physically fit than when they started.

Quoting Channon: "The ideas circulated by this mythical force [First Earth Battalion] began with combat of the collective conscience… the principal that if any contest is viewed by the television audience, it will be judged in the end on ethical superiority. The world will be watching and investigating soldiers after any major international military event."

However you want to be seen in the end requires a commitment in the beginning.

Historical US Army's Project Jedi Today:

The Wormhole Squadron

as a place for expanding on our understanding of human potential in honor Jim Channon & the tradition started in the military. By utilizing this place to carry on that tradition, early activity was a place to congregate for research, live projects & remote viewing but ultimately grew beyond our wildest dreams.

The member activity of this site for years was full of serious research into the potential of the human mind. So strong was the interest in human mental potential that these ideas began to dominate the site topics and activities. As the project grew it became exceedingly clear that we had a full squadron in need of thier own site; human mental/physical advancement is only one facet of the FEB. Today FEB members interested in the US Army's Project Jedi are known as the Wormhole Squadron.

So what happened to the forum and historical U.S Army Project Jedi information? The human potential study group was given the official title of the First Earth Battalion's Wormhole Squadron and now operates out of www.ProjectJedi.net. There we continue the tradition to dare to explore our unthinkable potential. Current activities of the Wormhole Squadron include intelligence operations for FEB, scientific research on human potential and application of physical fitness.

It is in this spirt our institution sprang into existance with the continued motto: "De Oppresso Liber"!

It is US Army tradition that the phrase is Latin for "To Free The Oppressed." but we may also consider an alternate translation "Free From Having Been Oppressed" as should be our goal for all mankind.
